BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Victor Herbert Strahm, 1897-1957, was born in Nashville, Tennessee, the son of Franz Joseph and Alice (Jones) Strahm. In 1910, the family moved to Bowling Green, Kentucky, when his father joined the music faculty of Western Kentucky State Normal School. Victor received his teacher's life certificate in 1915 from Western; continued his education at the University of Kentucky, majoring in engineering; and enlisted in the army with the rank of private in May 1917. He began his army career at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana; entered aviation training at Ohio State University; learned to fly at Dayton, Ohio, received his commission as first lieutenant on October 31, 1917; and was sent to France immediately. After additional training in France, he was attached to the 91st Aero Squadron, U.S. Air Service; promoted to the rank of captain; and awarded military medals. Strahm's duties included mainly surveillance and spotting, but he also was credited with downing five German planes.

Following his return to the United States in 1920, Strahm was discharged from the army. Planning to obtain his engineering degree, he entered the University of Wisconsin, but soon rejoined the army with his previous rank of first lieutenant. Strahm was stationed at various posts in the United States during the 1920s and 1930s. Sometime in the 1920s he married, and his wife's first name was Ruth. They had no children, and her death occurred between 1939 and 1942. In 1942 Strahm went to India and Egypt to assist in organizing the 9th Air Force. He was commissioned a brigadier general and received decorations from Britain and Poland. After World War II, Strahm commanded several air bases before retiring in 1953. He died in San Antonio, Texas, and his survivors included his widow, stepson, mother (d. 1963), and sister, Louise (Mrs. Carl Barber).

COLLECTION NOTE

The collection consists chiefly of Strahm's letters written to his parents during his overseas duty. More than one hundred letters dating from 1917 to 1919 were written while Strahm was in France, where he trained and flew missions even into the postwar period of 1919. Two dozen letters written during 1942 and 1943 cover his service as brigadier general in India and Egypt. There also are several newspaper clippings concerning Strahm's career from World War I to 1943. The forty photographs of Strahm, his associates (including a 1919 photo of Strahm, U.S. General William "Billy" Mitchell, and Edward, Duke of Windsor), and of airplanes, document his service. Other materials include a few printed items, a four-page summary of "American Airmen in the World War," a book of paintings of the 9th Air Force and copies of Aerial Age and Army and Navy Journal for January 1919. There is nothing in the collection dating after his mother's move from Bowling Green in 1944.
